Reverend Daniel Hettinger, above, gave the talk titled “Welcome to the Big Leagues.” Rev Hettinger maintains the ‘75 Cincinnati Reds were the best major league baseball team. On the team was Darrel Chaney who always used a self deprecating manner when talking about himself. Darrel played shortstop, 2nd base, and 1st base while with Cincinnati and then went onto the Atlanta Braves. After playing in the majors for a year he was sent down to the minors for a year to improve his hitting.

After he came back to Cincinnati, the shortstop position was not available because Davey Concepcion was playing there. As a result, he ended up being a utility player which affected his attitude. He thought “Do I matter?”. He got discouraged and went to the manager, Sparky Anderson. Sparky asked Darrel to pick a position he might want to play. Every position had a player that was either an all star or destined for the baseball Hall of Fame. Sparky said they needed his talent to be available to play any position at anytime. His talent fit being a utility player.

The overall theme of the talk was “Be ready when the game comes to you.” You don’t know when you might be needed. This is not only true in the game of baseball, but in life as well.

Sheriff Dave Walcher introduced Macy Wilson, a student at Peabody Elementary School, who is the Arapahoe Sheriff for a day.
